A city full of art and history, Namur is a treasure trove of culture, from archaeological and historical sites, museums and exhibitions to theatres, cinemas and festivals. You will find here some ideas for activities linked to culture or folklore.

Beyond its historic centre, Namur is also a green setting which does not lack creativity to showcase its natural heritage. Discover here its parks, theme gardens, nature reserves, areas of biological interest and other eco-tourist assets.

Namur stands at the confluence of the rivers Sambre and Meuse, offering magnificent views of the rivers, valleys, and monuments. A whole range of waterside activities are on offer, but simply walking along the quays is one of the best ways to visit the city.

Namur, a city of water, with a confluence in the middle of the city...

It's rare enough to merit emphasis! The Sambre and the Meuse rivers merge in the city, offering an unbeatable view beneath the fortress's ramparts.

Stop the clock and enjoy...

Ready for a little tour through the cozy pedestrian lanes, dotted with quaint shop windows? Here you will find shops, restaurants or even craftspeople... The art of living well is taken very seriously in the capital of Wallonia.

Smart and digital city...

Namur is proud to be a 'Smart City'. It is the first Walloon city to have joined this network of cities recognized by UNESCO, which places creativity and cultural industries at the heart of urban development plans for safe, resilient, inclusive, and sustainable cities, in line with the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

Namur was selected for its expertise in digital arts. But while the concept of the smart city was initially linked to the technological city, it is now a genuine model for sustainable urban development, which advocates innovation by and for its users, where digital technology is one of the possible solutions to current problems.

Listed as a world heritage site by UNESCO, and known as the Tour Saint-Jacques, the belfry was built in 1388 as part of the city wall. It became a belfry in 1746. Its purpose was to announce the time and town events and also to provide military defence.

Theatre

Designed in 1863 by Namur's town architect, Thierry Fumière, the theatre was burnt down in 1867 and rebuilt in 1868. It is one of Europe's last Italian-style theatres. Renovated in 1998, it now presents a fresco by French painter Garouste called "Theatre" which adorns the ceiling of the foyer.

Confluence district

The historical heart of the city, the confluence is the oldest district of Namur. There you can find the (1) "NID" museum (Intelligent and Sustainable Namur), a space that puts citizens at the heart of the debate around the future of Namur and questions the role of cities in the face of current and future challenges. In this district, you can also admire (2) the Walloon Parliament and (3) "l'Enjambée", the brand new cyclo-pedestrian bridge linking the 2 neighboring cities, Jambes and Namur.

On the other side of the river, you will see The Hall al'Chair which is located in the former district of the butchers, this building – one of the oldest in Namur – once served as a slaughterhouse in a covered market; hence its position on the banks of the Sambre river. By going on the roof of "Le Delta", Namur's cultural center, you can admire a splendid panorama of the Citadel.
